NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

449 West 14th Street
New York 14, N. Y.

To the Stockholders:

The Notice of Annual Meeting which follows sets forth the various matters to be acted upon by you at that time.

Included among these matters is a proposed pension plan for all Company employees. The plan was formulated after careful study and has been declared advisable by your Board of Directors as the plan best suited to the needs of our business. I, personally, with others in the organization, have studied the subject of retirement pensions and worked on the preparation of the proposed plan for many months and I ask that you approve it.

It is accepted American business practice today to provide, by means of a formal pension plan, for the timely retirement of superannuated employees or those who by reason of illness or other cause have become incapacitated after long years of service. This practice does not spring from a charitable motive. The personnel of the organization is its most important asset and the one which contributes most to success or failure. The practice of providing a formal pension plan arises from a necessity to keep the avenues of promotion open to younger men and thus protect the business from losses of efficiency likely to come with declining years.

As has been reported to you in past annual reports, the Company, practically since its organization, has had in effect an informal pension arrangement. By informal I mean that no retirement age was fixed nor were the conditions of retirement or the manner of computation of the pension definite. We believe, and it is generally believed, that the adoption of a fixed or formal plan will promote good employee relations, stabilize employment by reducing turnover and generally increase efficiency.

I call your attention to the fact that the plan is voluntary and subject at any time to change or termination. I have no thought that termination will ever be necessary, but the reservation of the right serves to protect the Company against unforeseen conditions which may arise in the future.

For all these important reasons your management asks that you approve the plan as submitted.

GEORGE H. COPPERS,
President.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

May 13, 1946.

To the Stockholders:

There is submitted herewith a copy of the minutes together with a brief summary of the more important discussion at the Annual Meeting of the Stockholders held on April 10, 1946.

I believe this should be interesting and informative to the great majority of stockholders unable to attend the meeting.

It is noteworthy that the total number of votes cast at the meeting was 5,177,072, of which 97.25% favored the adoption of the proposed pension plan and 2.75% opposed. This is the largest number of votes cast at any meeting in fifteen years.

Sincerely yours,

GEORGE H. COPPERS,
President.
